

Profile of John Cooper

John Cooper is the founder and Managing Director of JCA Occupational Psychologists in Cheltenham. He has been a Chartered Occupational Psychologist since 1993 and prior to that worked in retail, sales and travel.

JCA helps organisations to get the “best from people” and is the largest firm of business psychologists in Gloucestershire. Working with clients such as Virgin Mobile, Chelsea Building Society, BT and the Forensic Science Service, JCA enjoy an excellent international reputation for using their expertise in emotional intelligence to affect real change through executive coaching, team development, and leadership development.

John works with business leaders, teams and individuals to increase their effectiveness and decrease interferences caused by interpersonal and personality issues. His particular interests focus around personal and management development, coaching and interpersonal conflict.

Outside work, John is married to another psychologist! He enjoys sailing and has raced and taught in Europe and the USA and has also completed the Round Britain Yacht race.

Recent assignments for clients include:

- Executive coaching for senior managers and leaders
- Speaker on emotional intelligence at various high profile conferences including CIPD and British Psychological Society events
- Design and facilitation of team building events on board yachts in the Solent
- Fast track management development programme – design and delivery, coaching and mentoring high potential managers
